

The Clip Factory

Upload one video. Walk away with a week of reels.

What It Is

A content-repurposing service built on AI clipping tools like Opus Clip. You take one long video — a podcast, webinar, livestream, or talking-head recording — and turn it into a week's worth of short, captioned, reframed reels for TikTok, Instagram, and YouTube Shorts. The AI finds the best moments, adds captions, and reframes to vertical in minutes. You sell that time-savings to creators and businesses who are drowning in content demands.

How It Makes Money

You charge a monthly retainer to manage a client's short-form content: they hand you one long video, you deliver 10–20 polished clips ready to post (or you schedule them too). Your cost is a cheap software subscription plus your editing time. Buyers are coaches, podcasters, agencies, real-estate and finance creators, and local businesses that know they should post daily but have no time.

Startup Costs

- Opus Clip (or similar) subscription: $20–$50/month
- Captioning/editing polish tool (CapCut, Descript): $0–$24/month
- Scheduling tool (Metricool, Buffer): $0–$30/month
- Simple website / portfolio page: $0–$200
- Sample reels to show prospects (made from public videos): $0
- Total to launch: $40–$300

The Numbers

Software runs about $40–$80/month total. You charge clients $500–$1,500/month for a managed short-form package (12–20 clips/month, captioned and scheduled). With 6 clients at $800 = $4,800/month against ~$80 in tools and your time — a near-pure-margin service since the AI does the heavy lifting. Scale by hiring a junior editor at ~$8–$15/hr to polish clips, and 15 clients becomes a $10,000+/month agency.

How To Start

1. Subscribe to Opus Clip and learn its workflow end to end on your own test videos.
2. Make 3–5 stunning sample reels from a public podcast to show off your output.
3. Define a clear package: X clips/month, captions, custom branding, optional scheduling.
4. Niche down — pick one audience (e.g. business coaches or real-estate agents) to dominate.
5. Cold-DM and email creators/businesses who post long videos but few shorts.
6. Land 2–3 clients, nail your delivery process, then template and systematize it.
7. Hire an editor to scale once your process is repeatable, freeing you to sell.

Where To Get Customers

Prospect on YouTube and podcast platforms for creators with long content but weak short-form presence — they're your perfect leads. Cold outreach via Instagram DM, LinkedIn, and email with a free sample clip made from their own content (huge conversion lever). Post your own reels about content systems to attract inbound. Partner with podcast producers and agencies who need a clipping arm.

Pro Tips

- Send a free sample clip from their own video. Showing a prospect a finished reel of themselves converts far better than any pitch deck.
- Niche down hard. "Clips for business coaches" lets you reuse hooks, templates, and proof, making delivery fast and referrals easy.
- Sell the outcome, not the tool. Clients pay for "show up daily without lifting a finger," not for "I use Opus Clip" — never lead with the software.
